JAPANESE INVADERS RENEW THEIR EFFORT TO END RESISTANCE

Brief Military Action Reported Along North Bataan Front In The Philippines

SPORADIC COMBAT

Island Residents Have Been "Dispossessed" of Transportation, Homes

By John Henry
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—With the Japanese warlords ruling occupied areas of the Philippines with an iron hand, the invaders have renewed their effort to end all resistance in the islands with brief military action along the North Bataan front, the War Department reported today.
Although actual combat was of a sporadic nature, Japanese patrols were active, the Department said in a communique. "Incidental skirmishes" occurred, but results were indecisive, the War Department stated, adding that Japanese aerial activities were confined to reconnaissance.
The Department, however, disclosed that in forcing the yoke of their military rule on conquered areas of the islands, the Japanese have "dispossessed" Philippine residents of transportation and even their homes.

16 Entire Families Among Those at Worship Service

"Family Night" was observed at the service last evening in Calvary Baptist Church there being represented in the audience of approximately 175 people 16 families whose entire membership was present. Some of these included five and six to a family.
The pastor, the Rev. Lehman Strauss, in his sermon gave a challenge to citizens to get back to church, and to lead their families back. He urged restoration of the family altar, and daily reading of Bible. In his challenge to parents, he told that a fine precedent would be set if they would take their children to worship services instead of sending them.
The sermon was based upon 1st Kings, 18th chapter, the account of Elijah calling fire from heaven. His erection of an altar was likened to the setting up of a family altar; his sacrifice to individuals offering themselves; and then as in Elijah's case, prayer was stressed.

MAN DIES AS RESULT OF AUTO CRASH INJURY

Joseph F. Moskal, Phila., Dies In Nazareth Hospital; Companion's Condition Fair

CRASH AT CORNWELLS

One of the two men who were seriously hurt when the automobile in which they were riding struck a tree at Cornwells Heights early Saturday morning, died Saturday afternoon at 4:05 in Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia.
The dead man is: Joseph F. Moskal, 35, of E. Elkhart street, Philadelphia. He had suffered a fracture at the base of the skull.
Condition of the other man, Zymont Swinski, aged 20, of Chatman street, Philadelphia, is reported as fair at the same hospital. Swinski sustained a cerebral concussion.

Moskal was unidentified for several hours after the accident. He was unconscious when admitted to the institution, and did not regain consciousness.
The accident occurred at Cornwells Heights, early Saturday morning. The Pennsylvania Motor Police who investigated, Private Phillips and Leibergal, said that the car was proceeding south on Route 513, and at the intersection of Bristol Pike in Cornwells Heights, continued across the highway, striking a tree head-on. The car was almost demolished.

Bucks County Rescue Squad members took the two to the hospital, but their condition was such Saturday that neither could be questioned. Which man was driving is not determined as yet.

Eight Young Men Enlist In Reserve Defense Corps

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 19.—Enlisting in the Pennsylvania Reserve Defense Corps, which had its first drill in the armory last week, are eight young men, seven of whom are between the ages of 18 and 24 years.

First Lieutenant Edward C. Lukens, battalion adjutant for the local company, which will be a platoon of Company D of the P. R. D. C., in Philadelphia, was in charge of the enlistment, and announced that the Armory will be open each Thursday evening from 7.30 until 10 o'clock for further enlistments.

The eight enlistments included the following: George C. Ghebels, 34, Newtown R. D. No. 2; Clarence Kepler, 18, Decatur street; Norman town; Howard Roy Buckner, 18, North Hamilton street; Norman Kepler, 18, Decatur street; Norman John Buso, 19, North Main street, and William John Moran, 19, North Main street, Doylestown; Charles E. Frederick, 18, New Hope, and John B. Franklin, 18, of Furlong.
Ghebels served as company clerk assisting in the filling out of the records and typing them for First Lieutenant Lukens, who was busy interviewing the recruits and prospective candidates.

Lieutenant Lukens was pleased that a former Company D, Pennsylvania National Guard, ex-Private Victor Fell, arrived at the Armory and staged a drill, giving the eight new recruits their first work-out.
The officer in command pointed out that the P. R. D. C. will supply the recruits with uniforms and that the schedule will include drills, a school for non-coms and rifle practice beginning with the elementary theory of handling firearms and cleaning them.

"Child Welfare" Discussed By The Bensalem P. T. A.

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 19.—"Child Welfare" was discussed by members of the Cornwells Parent-Teacher Association, when they met in the cafeteria at the Bensalem Township high school, Thursday evening.
Among the questions brought up were: "How important are grades?" and "How often should a high school student go out at night?"
Mrs. Joseph Call presided during business. The pupil attendance banner was won by Miss Cathrin Fitzgerald's room.
Refreshments were served.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

GLEANED BY REPORTERS

The importance of saving paper is being impressed upon the minds of the pupils in the Doylestown township school system, according to Paul W. Kutz, principal, who presented his report at the meeting of the Doylestown township Parent-Teacher Association, held in the Edison school building a few nights ago.
He mentioned that all waste paper is now being baled, as a further aid in the defense effort.

Officers of the Associated Business Men of South Langhorne were elected at the February meeting.
The organization is considering South Langhorne. A new Scoutmaster sponsorship of a Boy Scout troop in has been secured, there being a nucleus of 12 boys for a troop in that borough.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of The Peoples National Bank and Trust Company of Langhorne was held on Wednesday at the bank. William F. Hibbs acted as chairman for the stockholders and Erle G. Cliver as secretary.

The largest number of votes ever cast elected the following Directors to serve for the ensuing year: Dr. Henry Lovett, Alfred M. Wildman, Samuel P. Knight, Henry C. Parry, Gage B. Ellis, Clinton M. Smith and Thomas E. Coe, Jr.
At a special meeting of the new board of directors the following officers were elected unanimously: Thomas E. Coe, Jr., president; Dr. Henry Lovett, chairman of the board; Alfred M. Wildman, vice-president; and Frank R. Mitchell, cashier.

The Nockamixon Township Parent-Teacher Association met in the high school auditorium, last week, with a large attendance. The program was in charge of Miss Martha Diehl, teacher of English in the high school.

The business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Herbert Melchior. The secretary's report was given by Mrs. Hollis Kline and the treasurer's report by Mrs. Clarence Weirback.

Robert K. Shafer, the supervising principal, announced that all necessary equipment for the operation of the cafeteria has been purchased, and it is expected hot lunches will be served at the school in a very short time.

Samuel Blenkin is Named President of Farmers Club

RICHBORO, Jan. 19.—At a largely attended session, Samuel Blenkin was named president of the Northampton Township Farmers Club last week.

Mr. Blenkin, who has succeeded Leonard Slack, was elected for six months, as were also the other officers which are as follows: Vice-President, Samuel Permar; secretary, Mrs. Wilmer Weir; treasurer, Furman A. Edwards; editor, Mrs. Horace Cornell, and executive committee, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Hollowell, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Atha and Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Wilson.

Harvey Stackhouse, a member of the crop committee, told of having attended a meeting where the greater production of milk, poultry, eggs, cheese and pork was stressed for home consumption and to be sent abroad.

Harry C. Wilson, also of the crop committee, said the recent snow has served as a protection for the grass and grain.

JURY FAILS TO REACH VERDICT IN DAMAGE SUIT

Fail to Agree After Deliberating Nearly Four Hours

FINAL CASE IS HEARD

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 19.—Deliberating nearly four hours, a jury, which failed to agree in a civil court case in which Miss Alice M. Cope, Wycombe, motorist, is suing Virde Callahan, Rushland farmhand, for $5,225, in an action in trespass, was discharged by President Judge Hiram H. Keller at 6.10 on Thursday evening and the case continued.

The trial began Wednesday and testimony was concluded about 11.30 on Thursday morning. The jury considered the case from 1.45 o'clock until after six o'clock.

The plaintiff's mother was killed, December 19, 1939, in a two-car crash, near Penn's Park. The defendant is employed by a well-known Rushland farmer.
Several witnesses for the plaintiff, who are in the United States Army, were unable to attend and the testimony involves many conflicting points of evidence concerning where the actual crash took place, whether the lights were burning on the one car and the heaviness of the fog at the time of the impact.

A new note was introduced into the case on Thursday morning when the plaintiff, Miss Cope, took the witness stand and exhibited in court a pan with a dent in the bottom. Miss Cope said her mother was holding the pan on her lap at the time of the accident and that she and the pan were thrown against the dashboard of the car so violently that the metal bottom of the pan struck the light switch and turned off the lights of the Cope sedan. The defendant's car was overturned in the collision.
President Judge Keller discharged the jury.

Wilkie Hears That Son Is Safe in Hawaiian Islands

CROYDON, Jan. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. William Wilkie have received a letter from their son, Charles Wilkie, stating that he and his family are safe in Hawaii.
The younger Mr. Wilkie is a petty officer in the United States Navy, having been in the navy for 17 years. He is located on the U. S. "Indianapolis," which is now in the war zone.

Petty Officer Wilkie writes: "We are going to win." His wife and daughter will leave for the United States as soon as possible, going to New York to remain with relatives until their husband and father can join them when hostilities cease.

Alien residents, outside of Bristol Borough, are to turn over the articles requested to Anthony Russo, Bucks County Detective.

Engaged in Grim Combat

Moscow — Russian and German soldiers fought grim, hand-to-hand battles in the streets of flaming Moshalsk today after the Soviets broke into the strategic stronghold and the Nazis, in desperation, put the town to the torch.
Latest reports from the battle zone 60 miles due west of Moscow said bloody, close-quarter fighting was raging from house to house and street to street in the ghastly light of the leaping flames.

Carrying out the final stages of their long campaign to trap between 100,000 and 200,000 Nazis in the Mazhaisk-Smolensk pocket, the Red Army forces finally crashed through Mazhaisk's defenses, the Red Army newspaper Red Star reported.

"The whole place is in flames," said the Red Star.

The paper also said the Soviets reached the center of another unsuspecting town after "methodically dislodging the Germans."

Other Russian forces were declared to have pushed within 60 miles of Smolensk, far to the west, as they squeezed their pincers ever tighter around the trapped but furiously fighting Nazis.

To Urge Passage of Bill

Washington—Attorney-General Francis Biddle goes before the Senate Judiciary Committee today in secret session to urge prompt passage of the "second war powers" bill, an administration leaders in Congress sought to speed passage of other measures.

Senate leaders predicted passage of the War Powers bill, despite the fact that it contains some proposals which have previously been rejected by Congress. One of these would permit the government to seize machinery in a factory manufacturing civilian articles and move it to another which is making defense articles.

Trains Are Kept Moving, But Railway Stations Black Out—

Lights on Airplane Beacons and at One Defense Plant Ordered To Be Kept Lighted—No Accidents Nor Arrests Reported During Period — All Lights in Lower Bucks County, with Bristol as Hub, Extinguished at 9.10 for Period of 15 Minutes.

Bucks County's first black out test under authorization of the United States Army proved to be to all official intent 100% perfect. The only lights gleaming and the only wheels moving were those authorized by the officials. Trains kept moving but railway stations were blacked out, flashes from air beacons which guide planes at night, cut through the darkness, and one defense plant in lower Bucks County did not black out in accordance with official regulations. Otherwise Bucks County came to a standstill, except in Morrisville, Falls Township and a portion of Lower Makefield Township, which were not included in the orders because of the congestion of traffic which would result in Trenton.

There were neither accidents nor arrests during the 15-minute period ending at 9.25, local, emergency and State motor police announced, and Earl Blair, chief county air raid warden, said "it's 100% perfect." Officials were particularly pleased at the co-operation of the citizenry in clearing streets of pedestrians.

On the other side of the river, however, Trenton had a case of "jitters" about 9.30 p. m., when the shrill blasts of a fire whistle were heard at the John A. Roebbling's Sons plant on S. Clinton avenue. The combination of the blackout on the Pennsylvania shore, the sharp sounds of the whistle, and planes flying overhead sent people scurrying to safety.

Sixty telephone trunk lines in the Trenton City Hall were clogged for 20 minutes as the excitement mounted through the city. Residents were finally calmed.

Twenty-four airplanes piloted by volunteers of the County Air Corps checked on the blackout, as did officials, including Paul B. Hartenstein, executive director of the Philadelphia Defense Council, from the tower of the county courthouse in Doylestown.

Dick Bircher, one of the pilots inspecting the blackout, said: "It was a slick job, so good that the only way I found my way back was by tuning in on a radio station and flying a compass course on that. All the lights flicked out simultaneously in Bristol, which I was over at 9.10, and from then on I saw only a dozen farmhouse lights, which I couldn't identify, and two automobile headlights, which didn't help orientate me either."

Lights were allowed on the lower bridge over the Delaware River at Trenton and on the Lincoln Highway as far as Oxford Valley, to prevent congestion at the bridge, but even traffic on this main artery was halted at Oxford Valley.

Some excitement was caused in the Doylestown section when a physician from East Orange was summoned to return at once to his hospital, where there was an emergency case. The physician, whose name was not given out, started to return to East Orange. Emergency police, seeing the car, gave chase, but could not catch up with him until he reached the New Hope bridge, where he was stopped. Upon producing his credentials he was permitted to proceed.

In the Lower Bucks County area with Bristol as the hub, all lights went out simultaneously with the sounding of the air raid alarm at 9.10 o'clock. The various industries in this section had all checked their time with Bristol police headquarters so that all whistles sounded the alarm simultaneously and street light went out instantly. It just appeared like a black wave had swept over the community and enveloped it.

With the sounding of the alarm, air wardens, emergency police, and firemen went into action and stood on the alert until the all-clear signal was given at 9.25 o'clock. Bristol's 1,000 air wardens and emergency police at once began a patrol of their respective beats. The emergency police halted all traffic while the air wardens checked every building in their districts and saw that if there were any lights burning that they were extinguished at once.

The headlights from P. R. R. locomotives and the flashes from the air beacon at Croydon pierced the darkness in Bristol. The flashes from the air beacon as it revolved illuminated the elevated water towers, most of which are painted aluminum.

The air wardens reported to their senior wardens and they in turn to Chief Jones, chief warden, and John E. Healey, asst. chief warden, here, while the emergency police reported to J. S. Lynn, chief of the emergency police in Bristol, with Anthony Russo as chief of the lower area.

Bell Telephone Co. and the P. R. R. Co., and the Philadelphia Electric Co., blacked out their plants. Blue bulbs were placed in all of the lights at P. R. R. passenger stations between Morrisville and Andalusia. Lanterns with blue globes were placed in service at all railroad stations.

The Bristol Consolidated Fire Department under Chief Clifford Hagerman, assisted by Joseph Buck, first assistant chief, assigned the apparatus of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department to various strategic points in Bristol. The fire apparatus were located at police call boxes where they were in constant touch with fire headquarters. ### Mrs. Roosevelt's Week

Washington, Jan. 17.

MRS. Eleanor Roosevelt protrudes herself into so many public fields and has become so much of a public character "on her own" that her attitude, activities and utterances are legitimate subjects for comment. Certainly, her persistent and continuous efforts to influence legislation and affect public opinion make her a factor that cannot be ignored.

ASIDE from her civilian-defense operations and her routine lines, such as writing a daily column and making a Sunday broadcast, in the week ending last Wednesday, Mrs. Roosevelt managed to attract public attention on an unusual variety of matters of general concern. It involves a considerable strain to say that in any of them she has advanced the national interests. The truth is a very good case for the reverse can be made out—always conceding that her motives are of the best and that from her point of view she is nobly discharging her duty.

IN the course of this week she interjected herself into three separate controversies, found herself criticized by at least three friendly columnists and inspired pointed suggestions from various sources that she retire altogether from the OGD. In addition, she used her own column to rebuke a writer who had reported that she had "lambasted" Mr. William Knudsen. She denied, declaring that all she had done was merely personally to present her views on civilian morale. "I said all this," she wrote, "directly to Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman in somewhat forceful terms, but without criticism of them." Altogether, the story of Mrs. Roosevelt's week

RUMORS AID ENEMY

All who remember the war of 1917-18 know how rumor flourished. It is not surprising that idle tongues should be at work in the current conflict. The government is much concerned with the peril of false stories and strives mightily to dissipate them, to prevent their circulation. One of the rather silly rumors which got about recently concerned the possibility of food being poisoned by enemy agents.

It is the tendency of some persons to forget that the government regards the citizen as of considerable importance to its own existence. Many of its bureaus are devoted to the sole task of keeping people alive. There are all kinds of public health services, there is the pure food and drug administration.

The latter organization was informed recently that rumors of food poisoning by enemy agents were being circulated, and Dr. P. B. Dunbar, assistant food and drug commissioner, immediately spiked them in a most practical manner. First of all, he said, there has not been a single instance to date where enemy agents have been involved in rendering commercial food harmful to health.

He added that the possibility is so remote that it need alarm no one, since an enemy agent, willing to take the risk, could do much more harm by other more effective methods.

The official spiked one rumor which had obtained wide circulation. It concerned a New England resident who reported that she had found glass in a can of Japanese crabmeat. Investigation, he said, disclosed that the so-called "glass" was a harmless chemical crystal which occasionally forms naturally in canned sea food. These crystals in sea food, he pointed out, are soluble in warm vinegar, a simple means by which to differentiate them from glass, which is insoluble.

Citizens interested in doing their country a genuine service while it is involved in war should not engage in rumor mongering, but should strive instead to do everything they can to prevent false information from circulating.

TIN SAVING IS NECESSARY

The lowly tin can is rapidly becoming an item of considerable value. Conservation of tin, a vital war industries metal, has been made imperative by the Japanese assault on Malaya and the fact that 80 per cent of the normal United States sources of tin have been cut off by the war in the Pacific.

Manufacturers of 29 items such as toys, buckles, musical instruments and jewelry have been ordered by the OPM to cut their use of tin immediately in half and eliminate use of it entirely by March 31. OPM Director Donald M. Nelson estimates that the conservation order will save 15,000 tons of tin during 1942 for the production of armaments. Normally American industry uses 100,000 tons of tin a year.

The United States is building a number of tin refineries, but it will have to depend for its supply mostly upon the mines of Bolivia and Africa. Temporary elimination of the Far Eastern sources makes rigid tin economy necessary. Tin thus takes its place beside paper, rubber and the thousand and one things the American housewife must learn to save in connection with the war effort.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Mar. 18, 1880. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Charles W. Peirce, who for the past eight years has been borough treasurer, declines to allow his name to be used in connection with the nomination this year. Mr. Peirce has proved an efficient and energetic treasurer, and his administration of the office has given general satisfaction. Probably no other man would have been able to collect the tax with so little loss to the borough as Mr. Peirce. If he chose to be a candidate, his re-election would be a matter of no doubt.

Bristol Lodge, No. 25, A. Y. M. (F. & A. M.), will celebrate its centennial on the 29th instant. The exercises will take place in the Baptist Church at 3.30 p. m. Among the interesting features will be an historical address by B. F. Gilkeson, Esq., and music by the Choral Society. A banquet will be held at the Lodge room in the evening.

On Monday, the Philadelphia Methodist Conference elected as alternate delegates to the General Conference, to be held in Cincinnati, Rev. J. Cunningham, of Bristol, and Rev. Dr. Chapman, presiding elder of this district.

Water was let into the canal this week and navigation will be active in a few weeks.

MORRISVILLE—Mr. Joseph Schell, brother-in-law of the Mr. Clark, cashier of Mechanics National Bank, of Trenton, has taken the beautiful farm, the late residence of Edward Balderston, deceased, and removed his family there.

Rev. M. L. Hofford, of Morrisville, has been invited by the executive committee of the Yardleyville Temperance Union to deliver an address in Martin's Hall, in that place, this evening.

It is said that Gen. William Schell, superintendent of census for the counties of Montgomery, Bucks, Northampton, Lehigh and Carbon, has already looked for the appointment to 329 districts, 3000 applications; so the ninth census will not fall for lack of workers, especially as the hundred applicants, more or less, from Bristol have not yet forwarded their applications.

Miss Susan B. Anthony had a stormy night for her lecture last week, but there was a pretty fair attendance. Her remarks were devoted to the task of showing the fallacy of the argument that women want bread, not the ballot. That she accomplished her object, as far as convincing her audience, may be assumed from the fact that upon a viva voce vote taken upon the proposed woman suffrage amendment to the United States Constitution no woman voted against it, and only four men were found upon the negative side.

On Tuesday evening, March 16th, Mr. Mahlon Moon and wife, of Morrisville, celebrated their golden wedding. Rev. Mr. Hofford, their pastor, was present, and a number of friends to congratulate the happy couple.

Mrs. A. M. Houston's lecture before the Bristol Institute on Tuesday evening, was probably the most successful as well as the most pleasing of the entertainments given by the Institute during the season. It was well attended, and the audience listened with appreciation and pleasure to the charming and exhaustive sketch of England's great novelist. Although evidently a great admirer of Dickens, Mrs. Houston did not praise him indiscriminately, but pointed out his faults, some of which she considered him not so much responsible for as his surroundings, and the customs of the times by which he was influenced.

The Great Game of Politics

is an interesting one, and not without importance, because she is a person of influence.

FIRST, there was her highly publicized refusal to cross the picket line in front of a New York theatre. Accompanied by her radical young protegee, Joseph Lash, she got her ticket money back, and later declared that "fair or unfair," under no circumstances would she cross a picket line. As pointed out by Mr. Pegler and others, this is equivalent to saying that right or wrong she always supports a striking union. Her belated letter, published on Tuesday, to the union boss, Petrillo, in which she expressed the view that the issue should be settled by arbitration, does not change her right or wrong attitude.

EVIDENCE of this has been given before. Some months ago she sympathetically addressed a meeting of Brooklyn strikers, knowing nothing about the merits of the strike. This fresh evidence came at a particularly unfortunate time, when efforts are being made to outlaw strikes during the war, and the professional labor leaders are trying to exact as a price partial acceptance of the Communist principle of labor management of industry. It is inevitable that Mrs. Roosevelt's utterance and action in this picket business be taken as sympathetic with any labor demand. And, of course, it is not possible to disassociate Mrs. Roosevelt from her White House connection, which is what gives her words weight.

HARDLY had resentment over this incident subsided before she barged into another highly controversial field, raising the race issue in a speech before a group of Washington women. She was quoted in the Evening Star as saying that the nation cannot expect the colored people to feel that the United States is worth defending if they continue to be treated as they are being treated now. As one instance of discrimination, the Star said, she cited the segregation of colored women from white in Red Cross first-aid courses. "In an air raid," said Mrs. Roosevelt, "the colored women would be expected to administer first aid to colored and white alike." It was stated that her remarks were received "with murmurs of both approval and disapproval." While, of course, she did not intend to do so, it is hard to think of a better way to stir up bad feeling.

BUT, this expression against race discrimination by no means ended Mrs. Roosevelt's extension of herself. She covered still more territory when on Tuesday she took a stand against cutting down appropriations for NYA and WPA and indicated her distaste for the Byrd committee. She had announced in a previous column that she had had Mr. Aubrey Williams, head of the NYA and one of her special favorites, to lunch the day before. So, it was not difficult to guess the inspiration of her opposition to the Byrd recommendations. It is interesting to note that Mr. Morgenthau signed the Byrd committee's report, and that the President, himself, advocates a considerable reduction in both NYA and WPA. There, of course, will be determined resistance in Congress to any economy at all. Unquestionably, Mrs. Roosevelt's words lend encouragement to the resisting elements.

FINALLY, there was her success in having Mr. Lash put on the executive board of the youth division of the OGD. Mr. Lash is secretary of the International Student Service, and has been charged with being a Communist. This he again denied last Wednesday. Asked if his former activities had not been close to Communist lines, he enigmatically replied, "You might say there was a time when Communists were Democrats." As one of the grounds for recent criticism of Mrs. Roosevelt has been the tightness with which, despite opposition, she holds on to her OGD directorship, the Lash appointment can hardly increase confidence in that agency.

NOW, of course, by her attitude on these things, Mrs. Roosevelt may have endeared herself further to the labor leaders, to the Negro leaders, to the Administration spenders, to the young radicals, and to the many who believe the Government owes them a living without work. Perhaps they do credit to her heart if not to her head and certainly they fit in with the picture of her as a great lover of humanity in the mass. But, they do other things, too. They create resentment and suspicion; they keep bitterness alive and promote disunity. And they are untimely, inept and unnecessary. In a single week Mrs. Roosevelt has succeeded in making it a little harder to move forward in at least three important directions. It is quite an achievement for one woman.

CHAPTER ONE

THE plane circled low, its single engine roaring and sputtering uneasily. The struts and fast turning propeller cut the air with a sound, half whistle, half hiss. It seemed to be in trouble, but the pilot manoeuvred to a three point landing and cut the contact. Quickly he jumped to the wing, then to the ground, and began examining his motor.

"Wizard!" he exclaimed, after a moment. "Absolutely wizard!" While the Royal Air Force expression, meaning that everything was fine, seemed familiar on his lips, there was the shadow of a southern drawl and a softness of voice that suggested Virginia rather than England as his home.

One side of his face was spattered with oil, as was his flying suit and the leather helmet which he had thrown to the ground nearby. The reason for his enthusiasm was the sleek, shiny Spitfire pursuit plane which he had brought down in a forced landing on the fairway of a convenient golf links. He had feared that the oil leak might be serious, but careful examination showed that it was not. "I'll fix you in half a shake," he said, addressing the plane. "Where's my—"

The sentence remained unfinished. From a zipper-fastened pocket he drew a small wrench. "There you are, little fellow. Now—"

As he worked, dark, slightly curled hair dropped over his forehead and into his eyes. Now and again he stopped to push it into place with the back of his hand, and once or twice he swore at it mildly. He spoke aloud to both the plane and to the wrench, quite as though they understood and might answer back. "There, little fellow . . . tighter, please . . . between us we'll get the old tin can rolling. Eh, old tin can? Now one more turn here . . ."

His tall, slender body was bent over and his head was practically in the motor. "There . . . hum . . . almost got it, little fellow." So intent was he on the job that he did not see a golf ball roll directly under the right wing. Nor did he see the girl, carrying only a midiron, follow the ball and stop beside him.

There was a smile on her face as she stood, feet slightly apart and holding her club firmly in both hands, watching him. Finally she spoke. "Would you mind moving your plane," she said, "so that I can play my shot?"

"What shot?" he asked, without looking up.

"This is a golf course, you know." "There's a war on," he said, still deep in his work. Then the beautiful quality of the half serious, half bantering voice, deep and musical, struck him and he looked up. "Oh! I—I'm so sorry. I didn't know—"

He was about to say that he did not know she was so beautiful, and caught himself.

"You didn't know what?" the girl pursued, seeing that he was flustered, and enjoying what she understood was a compliment to her looks.

"Didn't know that your ball—I mean, that you were under my wing—I mean—"

Her laughter was so catching that they were soon laughing together, and he had regained his usual composure.

"Just a second," he said. "I'll push it out of the way."

"Never mind. Please finish what you are doing. I'm really in no hurry, and your job's more important than mine." Then, when she saw his gaze go up and down her well cut khaki uniform, she added, "Just an ambulance driver with a day off to visit her family."

"Oh! That's great. I think you English girls are great."

"No compliments, Mr. American. You are one, aren't you?" He nodded. "Go back to your work and I'll watch you, if I may. I'm passionately fond of motors."

He made no objection. In point of fact he was always delighted to find someone who shared his enthusiasm for mechanical things, and when that someone happened to be a lovely girl he would probably have said that it was "wizard."

They stood together, shoulder to shoulder, she watching intently, he working. From the way he went about it she saw that he knew what he was doing. For a long moment he worked in silence, speaking neither to wrench nor plane nor girl.

About these two young people, intent on the job at hand and for the time being completely oblivious of the world outside, with its thunder-name is Philip. And now?" She held out a slender, brown hand that one could see was firm and muscular.

They shook hands with the frank comradeship of youth, made doubly frank and sincere by the fact that they were youth at war, living dangerously, sharing more or less to the same degree a common danger, constantly seeing death just around the corner.

"I'm David Hutchinson." She knew the name, but did not show it, believing rightly that this would embarrass him. Furthermore, she knew that R.A.F. pilots were reticent about themselves, and hated anything that had the suspicion of personal publicity attached to it. They did not like to ing, destructive war, the green countryside of Kent smiled under the September's sun. So far the angry force of Hitler had not struck here. Except for the presence of the Spitfire, and the two uniforms, war seemed far away indeed. Birds sang in the trees, or ran along the well kept fairways and over the greens in search of worms and bugs. There was no other sound on land or in the sky, except the clicking of steel against steel as the aviator worked on.

It was the girl who broke the silence. "My brother's a pilot."

"Pursuit pilot. He's just received his wings."

"What squadron?" The question was asked more out of politeness than from curiosity. Half conscious politeness at that. He had almost completed the job and was too intent on getting his plane ready for the air to have any real interest in the girl's brother.

"The Hornets," she answered. "He's joining them soon now, and terribly happy at the prospect. He says it's the best squadron in the R.A.F."

Women of County Consider
Defense In Its Many Phases

Defense in many phases is occupying many women's groups throughout the county.

Members of the Southampton Junior Women's Club, in session last week, named Mrs. Raymond O. Gilbert and Mrs. Stanley Edden as co-chairmen of the defense committee of the club. A number of members, interested in knitting, are to meet this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harry Tomlinson.

Many garments for needy children are being made by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Wrightstown. During the past few days, members made 17 small dresses.

"International Relations and Peace" was the subject upon which the Rev. Julian H. King spoke before members of Warrington W. C. T. U., last week. A general discussion followed, the meeting being held at the home of Mrs. Isabel M. Pursell, Warrington.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O Thou Who are the light of all who must walk alone in the path of shadows, teach us to so trust Thee that fear may no longer beset us. We confess that we have often faltered when we have put our own thoughts and imaginings in the place of Thine omniscience. We lament our constant reckoning with human weakness when Thou hast promised the joy of the Lord, which shall be our strength. Deliver us from such foolishness in the future, O God, and forgive our waywardness. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord, Amen.

Mrs. Joseph Stackhouse, New Buckley street, is ill at her home.

William Wright, Lafayette street, has been confined to his room for the past week.

Howard David has been ill at his home on Jackson street, this week.

John Finn, Lafayette street, returned home from the Wagner hospital on Thursday.

Miss Sara Howell, Buckley street, was removed to Abington Hospital on Friday.

Miss Theresa Schweighardt, Garfield, N. J., spent two days last week with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sokol, Taft street.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

The beat of the jungle drums pound out a pattern of tense drama, the romance of a beautiful savage native and a happy-go-lucky adventurer, plus all the color of the wilds of the tropics in in the new hit, "South of Tahiti," which opened yesterday at the Grand Theatre.

"Virile" is the word for the performance of Brian Donlevy in the starring role as the rough-and-tough pearl fisherman who winds up on an uncharted isle with his two pals, played by Brod Crawford and Andy Devine.

Suspense, thrills and absorbing entertainment—these are the qualities of "Target for Tonight," which opened yesterday at the Grand Theatre.

RITZ THEATRE

Proving that the appeal of a tender and genuine romance strikes as much of a responsive chord as it ever did with motion picture fans, "Smilin' Through," starring Jeanette MacDonald and Brian Aherne with Gene Raymond, opened last evening at the Ritz Theatre, to an enthusiastic audience. Nine ballads are interpreted by Miss MacDonald, who, photographed in Technicolor in the romantic setting of old England, was never seen to better advantage.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Film fans, meet Jackie Cooper, Hollywood's newest glamour boy!

Yessis, Jackie has matriculated into the big time although he still has three years to go before he'll be old enough to vote. He appeared at the Bristol Theatre, yesterday, in his first real grown-up picture, "Glamour Boy."

Sharing stellar honors with the 18-year-old Cooper are 17-year-old Susanna Foster, one of the screen's youngest songbirds. According to advance reports, this new romantic team makes "Glamour Boy" one of the season's brightest and freshest comedies.

"HUTCH" OF THE R. A. F.

NOW YOU CAN READ
Peter Muir's
Latest Serial in
THE COURIER

A Great Romance of the Present War
"Hutch" of the R. A. F., by the author of that outstanding success, "War Without Music," will thrill you from the first to the last word.

An American aviator with the R. A. F., "Hornets" makes a forced landing on a golf course in Kent. There he meets lovely Wendy Bruce—but he also hears that familiar drone in the sky—German Messerschmitts chasing one Spitfire.

He repairs his plane and flies off to join the fight. . . .

Romance intensified by the fever of war! Don't miss it! Starts in The Courier, today.

Peter Muir, author of that brilliant serial, "Hutch" of the R. A. F., which starts in The Courier today, was active in the Battle of France to the very end of the tragic debacle. He saw the war on both sides. He served in France as section leader of an ambulance corps in the American Field Service. He was captured by the Nazis, and saw at first hand, the full force of the German juggernaut before he made his escape.

Born in Charlottesville, Virginia, he drove an ambulance during the first World War. In 1922, he served on President Hoover's Relief Commission in Russia. Then after a period of newspaper work in America and Europe, he lived in France for six years previous to the outbreak of the present war.

He has received four citations for the Croix de Guerre, two during the first World War and two for his recent service in France.

Taken a German prisoner, he recently escaped and joined General de

BASKETBALL GAMES HAVE BEEN POSTPONED

The games of the Bristol Basketball League scheduled for tonight have been cancelled. They will be played tomorrow night on the Mutual Aid floor.

In the first tilt, Manhattan Soap A. A. meets Diamond and in the second encounter, St. Ann's plays Fifth Ward.

The contests will be the opening tilts of the second half race of the circuit, Profs having won the first half after beating Fifth Ward in a tie-off game.

OFFICE TEAM OF R. & H. LEAGUE WINS AGAIN

The Main Office team of the Rohm and Haas League continued its winning streak Saturday night with a 46-30 victory over the Plexiglas Fabrication five. In other contests, the Enzymes were routed by the Lykopen five, 47-8 and the Laboratory, 2, 5, 6, defeated the Carpenter Shop, 48-32.

Herman Schmidt with fourteen points led the Office force to victory. He was followed closely by McDonald and Esposito. Bailey's 12 points made him high scorer for the losing aggregation.

The Enzymes had little hopes in their tilt as they dropped behind 26-5 at half-time and only scored 1 point in the last period. Jones and Burke led the winners with 28 points between them.

Larry Larson's 16 points had much to do with the Laboratory win over the hammer and saw men. Johnny Zeffries and Abbott led the losing aggregation.

Aliens having in their possession the articles which they are requested to hand over should at once turn such articles over to the authorities.

Every German, Italian and Japanese national over the age of 14 in the United States was ordered today to apply for a "certificate of identification under threat of internment for the duration."

Attorney General Biddle issued the order, affecting approximately 1,100,000 subjects of the Axis powers. He said the Government had the dual objective of "strengthening our internal safety and protecting the loyal allies even if he has become technically an alien enemy."

The men must submit a photograph of themselves and answer questions concerning their relatives here and abroad, and their activities and occupations since the original registration.

TOUCHING ALL BASES

By Jack Gill
JUST PLAYING AWAY

It's not all in the power and heavy plunge. Of a bigger toe's off-tackle lunge; But a smattering of fight and a little brain. And the ability to absorb a lot of pain.

No man ever won a prize with ease; Nothing ever came with a magical please. The best of them "dug in" when the going got tough. And the winner never knew when he had had enough.

When the backs put on added drive and steam. When opposing adversaries start a "double team." That's when the "you" in the man comes out. And shows whether your heart is slim or stout.

For although your physical powers fall short. It's your task to hold the threatened fort. You may be lighter and appear no match. And each thrust may bring a bruise and a scratch.

Yet if you're in there plugging and playing away. You may never lose sight of a game saving play. And though you were pushed and humbly shoved. Still win the game that you played thru your love.

Though beaten and battered and hit till you're hurt. You won because you "stuck" and were ever alert. And as twilight descends at the setting of sun. You may rest in peace at a job well done.

This business of sports has its "ups" and "downs." For every success story there is one of failure. Someone has to win and somebody else must take the licking. Right now, Woody Wetherhold, new Bensalem coach, must feel rather discouraged as well as discontented. The young man can't seem to knit together a winning combination.

A hearty slap on the back never has hurt anyone just starting out in business, whether it be coaching, selling hardware or extracting teeth. Today Wetherhold needs all the help he can get not so much from the "well wishers" as from his boys down at Bensalem. Perhaps if the athletes down at Cornwells Heights would try a little harder, practice a little longer and in general, give to a greater extent, both Bensalem and Wetherhold, as "good a guy" who has ever taken a fling at coaching, would benefit.

A living portrait of a man "dying with his boots on" was painted in the Bristol gymnasium last Friday evening. Imagine, if you can, walking off the floor at intermission trailing by a 33 to 0 tally. As some kid seated at the scoring table remarked, "Whatta burning!"

It was truly the most lopsided contest I have witnessed in my career. And anyone with a heart couldn't help but feel a pang or two for both Woody and his boys. The 62 to 8 decision recorded by Bristol added more weight to the 70 point defeat poured on by Fallington earlier in the season.

Bristol tried hard to keep the tally from mounting, but even the second stringers couldn't help playing brilliant ball. No one can hold competitors back and it would be foolhardy for a coach to tell a high school boy to coast. It's just not a part of a good athlete's structure.

Through it all, however, Wetherhold, who won a championship on the court at Littlestown last year with a rangy quintet featuring several six-footers, tries to do a little better the next time out. It hurts to lose ordinary ball games, but it is quite knifing to assimilate those horrid affairs.

He's spending more time with underclassmen and Jay-vee teams that will come up as varsity timber in a year or so. The youthful new coach, who supplanted cagy George Reimer, one of the most proficient athletic directors the section has ever possessed, took on a different assignment from the start. He lost in football and he is losing in basketball.

Something is wrong someplace. It may be an overlooking of some simple fundamental or lack of sincere effort on the part of players. All a coach can do is teach his men how to play ball. On the floor, the boys are on their own. Even Coach Daugherty, whom I consider one of the best schoolboy mentors in Southeastern Pennsylvania, isn't doing so good at Jenkintown with a lack of proper material. In short, "Wait till the sun shines, Woody." Maybe your day will soon arrive.

Bucks County's First
Blackout Test Proves
To Be 100% Perfect

and the ladder truck remained in fire headquarters. Volunteer fire companies No. 1, 2 and 3 were on duty at their stations. The No. 3 blew their siren for the blackout and also the all-clear signal.

In the Municipal Fire Station was the ambulance of the Bucks County Rescue Squad, with a staff of first-aid nurses, and the station wagons of Marty Green and Mrs. Edward Taws, of "Chestnutwood-on-the-Delaware," at Andalusia. Mrs. Taws drove her own station wagon, while Marty Green, who is ill, assigned his chauffeur. Both of the station wagons are affiliated with the Bucks County Emergency Corps.

The police car, at the sounding of the alarm, pulled to the side of the road, extinguished all lights, but kept in radio contact with police headquarters where Chief Jones sat at the switchboard throughout the emergency period.

The ordinance plant of the Hunter Manufacturing Corporation did not black out, in accordance with previous instructions from officials.

Watchers manned the towers at the Grand Theatre and also at the K. of C. home, and at intervals signalled to each other with colored lights.

At the Harriman Hospital five operating rooms were prepared to care for any "casualties." In addition to the regular operating rooms, the maternity and X-ray operating tables were arranged as emergency outfits. The operating rooms were entirely blacked out by means of curtains, this including the skylights and the side windows. This preparation has been made so that in the event of a real raid, injured may be cared for, although for the test the hospital lights were turned off last night. Other blackout curtains have been so placed that light from the corridors will not show, yet activity may be maintained as usual in the hospital. Should there be an interruption in service of the Philadelphia Electric Company which supplies current to the hospital, the hospital's auxiliary lighting system can be used at any time. Messrs. Lester Shoemaker, Tullytown; A. C. Milliken, Jack Milliken and D. H. Krouse, Langhorne, were located on the hospital grounds with their station wagons, ready to use such as ambulances if necessary.

At the Wagner private hospital, blackout curtains have also been arranged in the operating suite, the delivery room and the corridors, so that work can continue in case of a real raid. Last evening, however, all lights were turned out during the test.

Both institutions report that no emergency operation cases were received during the period, and no babies were born at either institution.

Following the test the air warden and other officials of Zone 1 (first ward) met in the Keystone Hotel, and as they partook of a hot platter lunch discussed the test. Each told of experiences, some being unusual. During the discussion a report was made that one light was found on in the cellar of an unoccupied building.

First aid stations were set up in the sixth ward at zone headquarters, the office of Percy G. Ford, 1776 Farragut avenue; and at the pharmacy of Edward Finegan, 1614 Farragut avenue.

Workers of Zone 2 (second ward) met at the community house following the test to discuss the effectiveness of the blackout. The co-operation was 100%, with no violations, it is said.

Lights on the Burlington-Bristol bridge were turned off for the blackout period.

In the Fifth zone "there were no violations," according to Lester D. Thorne, zone warden. "The co-operation was 100 per cent in the third ward," according to Charles Weik.

The registration and information committee of Bristol Red Cross Disaster Committee set up headquarters in Bristol high school after the test following the procedure arranged in case there is ever a local disaster. Chauncey Stoneback, Jr., chairman of the committee, was present, as were also Miss Anita Wallace, Miss Anna Warwick, Franklin Wallin, and Thomas Coles, who will set up a filing system if there is ever a need, listing those appealing for aid. Miss Frances Landreth, Mrs. E. Linton Martin and Mrs. Marie Holland were also present, to arrange interviewing services.

The three ship navigation lights on the Delaware River in the Bristol area were turned off for the entire period of the blackout, according to Edward Dougherty, chief of the second zone in the borough, and also harbor master for Bristol.

Mr. Dougherty had contacted the Customs House in Philadelphia and authorities there had turned the keys over to him for the lights in this area on the river. He will have control of blacking out these lights for the duration of the war.

The blackout test in Hulmeville was very effective. In addition to the street and house lights, the industrial plants there were blacked out for the period. The siren of William Penn Fire Company, and mill whistles and sirens sounded the alarm and the "all-clear" signal. Several dozen emergency police and air wardens were on duty.

In Tullytown the test was also very effective, with no violations reported. Warden and emergency police in the Cornwells Heights area also reported 100 per cent co-operation from the residents in the test.

The need for a siren, which is to be ordered, was proved in the Andalusia area last evening. Emergency police located at State Road and Poquessing Creek to halt traffic coming in from Philadelphia county, reported they could hear no signals. A siren is to be purchased from funds donated by residents, and it is believed this will be heard in all sections of Andalusia.

Police report that operators of automobiles on the highways leading into Bucks from Philadelphia county were most co-operative, keeping their vehicles in line at the sides of the thoroughfares with lights off. Co-operation on the part of residents and operators of industries was excellent, it is reported.

To Remove Lombard Body Today

Las Vegas—Clark Gable, accompanied by a party of close friends, was to head a funeral cortege today carrying back to Hollywood the crushed remains of his beautiful wife, screen star Carole Lombard.

Among those with Gable were Spencer Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Griffith, Mr. and Mrs. Nate Wolfe—Miss Lombard's agent—and William Collier, Jr. Legal formalities for the removal of Miss Lombard's body from Nevada to California were completed late last night at an inquest held before a three-man coroner's hearing.

Earlier in the day, icy Double or Nothing Mountain, 35 miles south of Las Vegas, gave up the bodies of nine of the 22 persons who died in the crash last Friday night.

The body of another woman, besides the screen star's, and the remains of seven of the 15 soldiers aboard the ship were recovered after great difficulty by a posse of some 50 soldiers and civilians.

Tanker Torpedoed
Norfolk, Va.—The headquarters of the Fifth Naval District today announced that the Standard oil tanker, Alice Jackson, has been torpedoed off the North Carolina coast with the loss of 24 lives.

Thirteen of the crew survive, six of whom are seriously injured. The bodies of four of the dead have been recovered.

The sinking marked the third submarine attack off the Atlantic coast in the last six days.

(f) On farm tractors or other farm implements other than automobiles or trucks for the operation of which rubber tires or tubes are essential.

(g) On industrial, mining, and construction equipment other than automobiles or trucks for the operation of which rubber tires or tubes are essential.

The Pennsylvania Official Inspection Stations in Bucks County when making out the "Certification by Inspector" of the Application Blank are expected to aid the Local Tire Rationing Boards by clearly describing each tire on the vehicle, specifically stating if it is worn smooth and whether it is retreadable, recappable, or repairable.

Jury Fails To Reach Verdict In Damage Suit

the entire panel of jurors after a jury had been drawn in the case of Tourison Construction Company, Inc., versus the New Hope-Solebury Joint Vocational Board, growing out of an action in assumpsit involving a claim of $2,001.83.

Since it is the final case to be tried this term, and the most detailed and difficult, President Judge Keller also told court officials to notify the men and women jurors that there will be no civil court this week.

According to the statement of claims, the defendant wished to recover the sum of $2,001.83 with interest from June 8, 1939. The defendant, paid from February 15, 1939, to December 30, 1940, a total of $13,820.10. The plaintiff avers that October, 1938, he agreed to build an addition to the school to cost $14,975.

The only witness to testify on Thursday afternoon was Ashton Tourison, Jr., president of the Tourison Construction Co., Inc., 27 East Durham street, Mount Airy.

The trial will take several days because of the complicated details involving contracts and blueprints.

Following a conference when both sides agreed to discuss a possible settlement, President Judge Keller withdrew a juror, discharged the jury and ordered the case continued.
